Re: DEFINITION AND/OR SCOPE OF THE TERM “DATA SUBJECT”

Dear [Redacted],

This pertains to your query which was received by the National Privacy Commission (NPC) on 12 December 2016, via email. You requested for a clarification regarding the “proper construction/interpretation” of the term “data subject”, as defined in Republic Act No. 10173, also known as the Data Privacy Act (DPA) of 2012, as well as in its Implementing Rules and Regulations (IRR).

Section 3(c) of the DPA defines a data subject as “an individual whose personal information is processed.” The IRR of the DPA is more specific when it declares that the term refers to “an individual whose personal, sensitive personal, or privileged information is processed.”

When the foregoing provisions are read in conjunction with Section 3(g), §3(d).

1 IRR of RA 10173, §3(d).
2 “Personal information refers to any information whether recorded in a material form or not, from which the identity of an individual is apparent or can be reasonably and directly ascertained by the entity holding the information, or when put together with other information would directly and certainly identify an individual.”
3 “Sensitive personal information refers to information regarding an individual’s race, ethnic origin, marital status, age, color, and religious, philosophical or political affiliations;
4 Privileged information refers to any and all forms of data, which, under the Rules of Court and other pertinent laws constitute privileged communication.”
information, and privileged information, respectively, it becomes abundantly clear that a data subject can only refer to a natural person.

For your reference.

Sincerely,

JAMAEL A. JACOB
